

To Whom it may concern.....

_____ and I were married in _____. My first wife had died a few years before, and _____ and her first husband had divorced a year before. The divorce was quite nasty and revengeful. Her former husband and their _____ remained in the homestead. Neither of the _____ had finished college or had ever held a full time job, and remained living at home with their father. Both had been involved with illegal drug activities and the oldest, _____ has been institutionalized for mental problems. _____ continued to visit his mother as we treated him to dinner, movies, and shopping on several occasions. _____ the younger son was very hostile, aggressive and disrespectful towards his mother, never having written her, called her or corresponded in any way for over fourteen years; no Mothers Day, Christmas, Easter cards or telephone calls. _____ her former husband continued to write her about _____ behaviour. When _____ her former husband remarried he purchased a home for his _____. For a few years they lived in this residence but could not "get along", so their father sold the property and provided separate homes for each. Finally, _____ was arrested for a minor infraction and committed to _____ for therapy, and until this day remains under their care.

A year or so ago, _____ decided to enter law school at the age of _____ and despite the fact that there are many law schools in the _____ he decided to move to _____ for some unexplained reason, to resume his career. _____ father sold the home he had provided for _____ financed this venture, paid railroad fare to _____ and sent _____ automobile by rail (seemingly _____ had lost his driving permit) and set him up in _____. For the two years _____ has been in _____ has not entered law school but has taken several related courses. All during this time, as far as I know _____ has not corresponded directly with _____ mother but she has been continually informed by her former husband of _____ activities by copies of _____ letters to _____ father sent to her by _____ father.

I have withstood all of these "goings on" with patience and particularly so since I felt that it was doing my wife _____ no psychological good. I was always insisting that no _____ individual could make a new life for _____ under these circumstances and that she should throw up her hands as far as future worry about an impossible dream. Lo, I was soon to find out through opening a letter addressed to her from the tax division in _____ of the real estate taxes due on property owned by her and _____ and confronting her with the news, she admitted that she had purchased in her name as coowner with her son, _____ a condominium for the price of $15,000.00. I was so flabbergasted and shocked, that I had to seek outside advice for my sanity. It was decided by my advisor to forgive; and to get a lawyer to transfer title of said property completely to _____ to avoid possible future suits against owners of said property. This having been done, life settled again to normal routine. Mind you, all of the transactions supposedly were done, I guess, through her and her former husband since she claims not have heard from _____ directly.

Upon returning for an extended trip to Europe, we found a letter from _____ supposedly the first direct mail from him in approximately fifteen years. I gave it to her and she read it, and was reluctant to allow me to read it; she said, because it was full of damning language toward me. I do not blame her for her reluctance at letting me see it because it was a letter of a maniac. Excoriating me as a damnable individual who ought to be dead and he wouldn't be satisfied until he hears of my demise. Then, the gist of this letter, supposedly their first direct communication in years, he explains that he is about to move to another city in _____ and enter a school for a year to take a course barely related to law sending her a schedule of _____ nine months rental bill of several thousand dollars; that _____ decided not to rent _____ newly acquired property but sell it; And with no reference as to what _____ plans to do with the proceeds of the sale. The letter also referred to _____ new found _____ friend who is of the Caucasian race and that _____ someday hopes to marry _____ and give his mother the happiness of a _____ she so richly deserves.. In previously letters from _____ to _____ Dad, _____ has bragged about _____ communications with white incarcerated _____ in state prisons whom _____ is assisting, hoping to _____ them upon their release.

So much for the above; It is a recitation of my problems which must soon be resolved whenever I can decide what course to pursue other than conversations with my wife which so far seem to be unproductive and filled with inappropriate discussions and a lack of concern for their seriousness. I fear I am somehow deemed to be the causative factor in this problem, and I cannot seem to get any satisfaction that further negotiation is feasible. This article is written for her to digest and rationally discuss what can be done realistically or whether we need outside advice and or therapy
